Factory Investigations 2013-2014

WORKER RIGHTS CONSORTIUM

JoeAnne Dominicana

Santiago, Dominican Republic

WORKER RIGHTS CONSORTIUM

WRC Investigation

- JoeAnne produced collegiate apparel for Franklin Sports, and non-collegiate apparel for adidas
- WRC launched an investigation in response to complaint from workers in 2013
- Findings: Seven workers terminated for actual or perceived union activities, violation of Dominican law and university codes
- Factory refused to cooperate with WRC investigation; WRC contacted buyers to take corrective action
- Buyer Response:
 - Franklin Sports failed to respond
 - Adidas declined to act pending the outcome of its own investigation

Outcome

- Six of the seven fired workers were reinstated with backpay six months after the violation occurred
- Failure to prevent or immediately correct these violations exacerbates the damage done to workers' associational rights
- Part of an ongoing pattern of illegal retaliatory dismissals that licensees' own labor rights programs have failed to prevent

Current Status

- Management and the union have worked jointly to address workplace issues after union filed complaint with Ministry of Labor
- Management continues to express verbal anti-union animus

Yue Yuen

Guangdong, China

Yue Yuen

- Manufacturing arm of Pou Chen Group, largest athletic shoe manufacturer in the world
- Produces 300 million pairs of shoes per year
- Buyers include Nike, adidas, Reebok, Asics, New Balance, Puma, Converse, Merrell, Salomon, and Timberland (VF)
- Pou Chen is a Fair Labor Association participating supplier
- 400,000 employees in Taiwan, China, Indonesia, Vietnam, Bangladesh, Cambodia, the United States, and Mexico
- History of workers' rights violations

Yue Yuen

Guangdong Province

- Approximately 45,000 employees
- Produces collegiate licensed shoes for Nike and adidas

Violations

- Failure to make legally required payments into public social security system
 - Social security provides funds for workers in case of disability, unemployment, or retirement
 - Employers and workers pay in
 - The less money the company pays, the less money workers get
 - Estimated underpayment: $26.5 million per year
- Alleged underpayment of legally mandated housing benefits

Worker Response

- Individual worker complaints produce no resolution
- April 5: Workers launch first strike
- April 14: Workers launch second strike
- Estimated 30,000 workers participate
- Physical blockading of workers from participating in strike
- US$27 million cost to Yue Yuen

Arrests of workers and advocates

- NGO advocate Zhang Zhiru: detained and released
- NGO advocate Lin Dong: still detained
- Reports of workers arrested and detained

Nike response

- April 11: “We will have additional information to share with you early next week. “
- April 17: “We are reviewing the situation internally and will get back to you shortly with a response to your questions.”
- April 25: “This is a complex situation and we are continuing to gather information. We will follow up....”

Adidas response

- “It is our understanding that the social security contributions which YY had been providing... were in accordance with an agreement which they had reached with the Dongguan authorities and the local social insurance bureau.”
- Denies media reports that adidas pulled production from Yue Yuen
- Contacted local authorities re detainees

Failure of Brand Audits

- Easy-to-detect, longstanding violation allowed to persist
- Adidas: Failure to disclose collegiate shoe production

Partial resolution

- Ministry of Human Resources and Social Security: Yue Yuen did not make legally required payments
- Employer commitment to pay appropriate social security benefits and new $37 monthly allowance
- Lack of resolution re back payments
- Majority of workers back at work
- Reports of police presence at plant to compel all workers to return to the production lines

Key Recommendations: Yue Yuen

- Provide legally mandated payments to employee benefit programs from this point forward;
- Provide retroactive payments;
- Provide workers with clear documentation, both for the retroactive payment and for all future payments, of the amounts paid and the calculations on which they are based;
- Provide workers with all contractually or legally mandated payments, including any such payments for food and housing; and
- Allow all strikers to return to work without penalty.

Key Recommendations: Licensees

- Press for the release of Lin Dong and any Yue Yuen workers still in custody for exercising their associational rights
- Identify and correct the flaws in their auditing process that allowed Yue Yuen to avoid paying legally required social security payments without detection

Labor-management relations: October-November 2013

- October 2013: Workers affiliated to FEASIES and STIT unions strike
- October 30, 2013: Factory management commits to negotiate a contract with the STIT union
- November 30, 2013: Plant manager indicates that his superiors are not willing to negotiate a contract and he is being transferred.
- Early December 2013: Plant manager reports that Argus has indicated it will not invest further resources in MDR/CCC.

Factory Closure

- January 7, 2014: Workers arrive after vacation to find factory closed.
- Approximately 1,200 workers
- Workers owed at least $1.6 million in severance, plus pay for final week
- Pension and health care funds owed $30,000-60,000

Management Announcement Distributed on Jan 7

“This [closure] is in response specifically to the financial and operational damage to the company and its clients caused by an illegal strike organized in the month of October 2013.”

Freedom of Association Violation

- Why did the factory close?
 - Statements by transferred plant manager
 - Factory had reported financial difficulty to HBI and FOTL during 2013.
 - HBI and FOTL report that they did not decrease orders in late 2013.
 - Levi's licensee, Hampshire, placed new orders during that time.
- Conclusions:
 - Insufficient evidence to assess whether closure was retaliatory
 - Claim that factory was forced to close by economic impact of strike is not plausible, and resulted in chilling effect.

Prolexus Bhd. Honsin Apparel (Malaysia)

Human Rights Violations against Migrant Workers
September – November 2013

Prolexus Bhd.

- Garment manufacturer in Malaysia, longtime supplier of collegiate apparel, currently to Under Armour (at Plas Industries facility), formerly to Nike (at Honsin Apparel).
- Prolexus' Honsin Apparel facility currently supplies non-collegiate apparel to Under Armour, Nike, Li & Fung, and Haddad.
- Honsin Apparel facility employs approx. 1000 workers, mostly migrant workers, more than 200 from Cambodia.

Abuse of Migrant Workers in Malaysian Apparel Sector

- As incomes have risen in Malaysia, garment factories increasingly rely on migrant workers from lower-wage countries – Burma, Cambodia, Indonesia, Vietnam, etc.
- Government sets strict regulations for migrant workers, aggressively arrests, imprisons and eventually deports those found in violation.
- Regulations abusive on their face (e.g., prohibit pregnancy), but even harsher in actual enforcement (imprisonment and deportation for practically any health condition).
- Employers take advantage of vulnerability of migrant workers to deduct exorbitant recruitment fees from pay.

Background Information on 2013 Migrant Worker Detention Case

- July 2011 – 19 year-old Cambodian female worker travels to Malaysia and begins work at Prolexus' Honsin Apparel facility.
- Pays $730 in wage deductions as recruitment fee during first 15 months at factory (approx. 30% of total wages).
- June 2013 – worker fails government-mandated annual health exam due to symptoms of urinary tract infection.
- Factory-selected physician provides OTC medicine to relieve symptoms, but not antibiotics to treat UTI.

Jailing of Migrant Worker

- Mid-July 2013 – Worker re-tested but fails health exam (4 times) due to lack of treatment, work permit cancelled.
- Late August 2013 – Worker informed of permit cancellation and illegal status in country.
- Factory management suggests worker return to Cambodia via overland route used by sex traffickers, worker refuses.
- September 1 – Malaysian Home Minister announces crackdown to “flush-out illegal immigrants.”
- September 9 – Factory management takes worker to government immigration office to arrange return; police arrest and jail worker.

Worker Sentenced to Prison Term

- Sept. 13 - Worker “tried” without legal counsel or interpretation, sentenced to 4 months imprisonment, to be followed by detention and deportation.
- Other Cambodian employees at factory go on strike to protest worker’s imprisonment.
- Cambodian workers contact WRC, Cambodian and Malaysian NGOs; WRC contacts Nike, Under Armour and Haddad.

October 2013

- Worker's health deteriorates, but still not given medical treatment for UTI, physician consulted by WRC expresses concern.
- Local NGO learns prison release date set for November 30, to be followed by transfer to pre-deportation immigration detention center.
- WRC presses Nike, Under Armour, factory management to secure worker's early humanitarian release.

Worker Released and Receives Medical Attention

- Case opened for re-hearing on October 30.
- Worker represented at rehearing by company lawyer.
- Judge orders immediate release.
- Worker examined by doctor, given antibiotic treatment.

Worker Returns Home, Receives Compensation and Treatment

- Worker provided airfare for return to Cambodia, brother given leave from factory to accompany her.
- Company pays substantial compensation to worker for lost wages, medical treatment and hardship.
- Dec. 2013 - worker hospitalized for 7 days for ongoing treatment.
- Apr. 2014 - worker reports positive recovery.

WRC Recommendations to Licensees Sourcing from Malaysia

- Ensure immediate medical treatment for migrant workers who “fail” health exams.
- To avoid arrest and detention, ensure prompt and safe return home for migrant workers who lose legal status.
- Prohibit and ensure compensation for recruitment fees paid by migrant workers through payroll deductions.
